II. In figurative and transferred applications.

Under the following heads are placed only those figurative uses which admit of being classified under some general concept. Further illustration will usually be found under the verbs most commonly occurring in the various phrases, together with many special uses which are confined to one or other of those verbs (see e.g. Bring v. 27, Cast v. 83, Come v. 69, Draw v. 89, etc.). Some uncertainty attaches to the origin and development of many of these uses, the variety of which is so great that the adverb comes to present a number of highly divergent and even directly opposite senses, e.g. to find up (sense 19) in contrast with to break up (sense 21 b).

8. From a lower to a higher status in respect of position, rank, or affluence. (Cf. Set v. 154 j.)

U P, U. P.: see UP adv.[2] 12 e and U 5.

U. P. (= United Presbyterian): see U 4.

Up-, prefix, representing OE. up-, upp- (see below) and corresponding to OFris. op-, up- (WFris. op-, NFris. ip-, ap-), MDu. and Du. op-, OS., MLG., and LG. up-, OHG. and MHG. ûf- (G. auf-), ON., Icel., and Norw. upp-, MSw. up-, upp- (also op-, opp-), Sw. upp-, MDa. and Da. op-.

The prefix is identical with the adverb UP[1], from which in OE. it becomes clearly separable only when prefixed to nouns and adjs. In the cognate languages there is much variation in the extent to which it is employed with different parts of speech. In OS. and OFris. it occurs with verbs and nouns, in OHG. with verbs, nouns, and a few adjs., in ON. chiefly nouns, in MHG., MLG., MDu., MSw., and MDa. with both verbs and nouns, and occasionally adjs. In the later and modern forms of these languages the use of the prefix has increased as in English, and parallel formations are very common; these are cited only when the Eng. component is important enough to appear as a main word.

Of the numerous formations with up- which have been employed in English, only a limited number are of a permanent character. A large proportion consists of forms simplyed for the occasion, especially for metrical reasons, and the same compound may recur several times without any historical continuity; such isolated occurrences, indeed, are often separated by an interval of several centuries. A number of these are given in the following sections, as illustrations of the various uses of the prefix in the different periods of the language.

I. In comb. with sbs. (except as in 7, 8).

1. In OE. up- occurs freely with sbs. in the sense of 'occupying a higher position', 'upper', 'superior', as up-eard, -ende, -engel, -flór, etc. Some of these, however, are only found in poetry. In ME. this type practically disappears, and in later use is chiefly represented by UPLAND sb.[2] and UPSIDE, with an occasional rare formation, as upwold.

b. With the sense of 'in a supported state', up- occurs with nouns in OE. upheald, ME. uphald, uphold, ME. uphóle (naut.), and the modern upkeep.

2. In the sense of 'upwards' OE. had compounds of up- with nouns, mainly derived from intransitive verbs, as up-cynne, -færeld, -ryne, -spring, -stige, rarely from transitive, as upweary. Of these only upspring and upsty survived in ME., but a number of new formations were added, as the obsolete uparist, -brixle, -brud, -ras, -rist, and the surviving upbraid, -come, -rise, -set. Between 1450 and 1800 new formations are rare, the chief being upcast and upstir in the 16th cent., with upskip and upstart (as designations of persons) from the same period; also upshot (with variants -shoot and -shut), in which the force of the up- is not clear. After 1800 the type reappears and subsequently becomes common. A considerable number of the examples are of sufficient importance to be entered as main words in their alphabetical places, as upheat, -break, -burst, -flow, -growth, -heaval, -lift, etc. Others of more recent origin or less currency are upblaze, -curl, -curve, -drift, -glance, -gush, -haul, -heave, -jet, -jump, -lifment, -slip, -sweep. In upset, as in the corresponding verb, the prefix is employed in an unusual sense.

1677 Sec. Packet of Advices to Men of Shaftesbury 55 They are better at Up-cry, and Out-cry, and Down-cry. 1876 MERRIFIELD Branch. Carver xxvi, It suggested an arrow-head in the *up-flight. 1860 HAWTHORNE Marb. Faun xvi, The shifting..*up-gush and downfall of water. 1860 VIVIAN Deb. Coal Clause (1861) p. xvi, The 'Great Lower Veins', varying from 50 feet on the Northern to 200 feet on the Southern outcrop, and upwards of 70 feet on the Central *upheave. 1827 Sporting Magazine L. 128 He received some dreadful *up-hits in his throat. 1850 'H. HOOVER' Pract. Horsemanship 189 The moment he does this, give him an *up-pull. 1839 URE Dict. Arts 893 The line over 5, represents the down-shift, and d' the *up-shift [of a vein]. 1896 Whitby Gloss., Upshow, ..display.

b. More rarely, up- is employed in the sense of 'upwards', with other nouns than those of action, e.g. OE. upweg, early mod.E. upway, and the recent up-grade, -road, -shaft, -wave.

II. 3. Up- is rarely employed in combination with adjs.: upheaded (16th cent. and mod. dial.), upstraight (17th cent.), upfingered, upheartied, upnosed, and upsighted (19th cent.) are unusual types, as also are upspring and upstart (16th cent.) employed as adjs., but retaining the form of the noun or verb.

III. With verbs, participles, verbal substantives, and agent-nouns.

4. In OE. the placing of up immediately before a verbal form was determined by the syntactical principles which have been explained in the article on OUT-. The number of verbs with which up was commonly employed in this way is not large; it includes dbrecan, dhebban, dræran, drisan, etc., gán, hebban, wecan, springan, spryttan, stigan, ynnan. It is difficult to determine in how many of these the adverb had become a real prefix, but apparently it had attained this function in some forms, as up-dhebban and upheban. In ME. the use of the prefix is thoroughly established, though it is not always possible to distinguish between real compounds and simple precedence of the adverb on metrical or rhetorical grounds. A number of these uncertain examples may be found under various senses of UP adv.[1] Of those established compounds which require separate entry some occur as early as the 13th century, as upbraid, -break, -bring, -come, -go, -nim, -stand, etc., and many more are found from about 1300 onwards, as upblear, -call, -cast, -draw, -give, -heave, -hold, -leap, etc. Others have been constantly added during the following centuries, so that even with the disappearance of earlier instances the type has been well maintained down to the present day. A considerable proportion, however, occur only in poetry, and are simple substitutions for the verb followed by the adverb, although they are regarded as real compounds and written as one word.

In the OE. collocations or compounds the prefix has regularly the sense of 'upwards'. In ME. it also assumes various transferred or figurative senses of the adverb, and latterly may have any meaning which has attached to this in connexion with a verb, e.g. upbind to bind up; up-pen to pen up; upspeed, to speed up, etc. The same variety of meaning naturally occurs also in combination with participles and verbal nouns.

In addition to those which are entered as main words, the following examples illustrate the tendency to employ the prefix in place of the adverb. The first group contains examples earlier than 1650, the second those of more recent origin (mostly after 1800); where no definition is added, the meaning is that of the simple verb in conjunction with up.

The earlier group could be considerably enlarged by the inclusion of examples from Scottish poets of the 16th cent., esp. Douglas, who freely employs such forms as upblese (= blaze), -flow, -glide, -hese (= raise), -kindle, -rax (= stretch), -rive, -sprent, -steud, -steur, -strike, -swak, -swarp, -swelle. Instances from other authors are upbracis, -heck, -lese (= gather), -sit, -skail, -spread, -sprinkle, -wen (= rise).

5. The use of up with past pples., originally syntactical, gave rise to compounds of which several had already so far established themselves in OE. that derivatives in -nes and -lice were formed from them. Examples are up(d)hafen, upāhefed, up(d)sprungen, upāstigen, upcumen. In ME. a number of new formations appear; among the earlier of these are upborne, -drawn, -folden, -hung, -laid, -lifted, -reft, -risen, -set. In the 16th and 17th cent. there are also frequent examples, and the type is still usual, but at all periods these forms have been mainly employed in verse. When used attributively the stress is normally on the prefix, but metrical instances frequently retain it on the stem.

The following are illustrations of casual examples of earlier and later date; a few others are used by Scottish writers of the 16th cent., esp. Douglas.

(a) †upaheven [OE. up-āhafen], lifted up, uplifted; †upbounden, tied up; upbred, -framed; †upgraven, dug up; †upholst, lifted up; uplet; †uplent, arrived on high; upploughed, -puffed, -pulled, -reft, -rent, -ripped, †upsete(d, oppressed; †upshet, shut up, enclosed; upshut, -soaked, †-soaken, -stalled; †upstreyht, upstretched; upsucked, -trailed, †-whelmed, -wrapped, -wrought.

6. The use of up before present participles, and forming possible combinations with these, is somewhat rare in OE.; the chief examples which occur are up(d)stigende, upstandende, and upyrrende. ME. furnishes a few instances, as uparising, -hanging, -looking, -springing, -tempering; but this type of formation becomes common only after 1500. In the following illustrations of casual forms the earlier examples are separated from those occurring after 1700.

b. In the earlier periods of the language these forms in -ing were not employed attributively. Examples of this use begin to appear in the 16th century, but are not common before the 19th. As adjectives, such compounds would normally have the main stress on the prefix, and a secondary stress on the stem (e.g. upbearing, upcreeping), but in verse the full stressing of the stem is frequently retained. The following illustrations of rarer forms are divided into earlier and later instances.

[Early ME. upon, uppon, etc., f. UP adv.[1] and adv.[2] + ON prep.; distinct from late OE. and early ME. uppon, var. of OE. uppan Up prep.]

The compound may have partly arisen from uses of upp on or uppe on in the instances cited Up adv.[1] and adv.[2], but the date at which it appears, and the locality of the texts in which it is first prominent, suggest that it was mainly due to the influence of ON. upp á (MSw. up a, op a, uppa, oppa, etc.; Sw. på, Norw. and Da. paa), with which it agrees in laying the stress on the preposition and weakening or altogether ignoring the force of up. In the mod. Scand. tongues, except Icelandic and Færöese, the reduced form på, paa, corresponding to Eng. (colloq. or dial.) 'pon, 'po', has displaced the simple prep. á, a = on.]

Originally denoting elevation as well as contact, the compound has from the earliest period of its occurrence so far lost the former implication, that it has been regularly employed as a simple equivalent of on, in all the varieties of meaning which that preposition has developed. The use of the one form or the other has been for the most part a matter of individual choice (on grounds of rhythm, emphasis, etc.) or of simple accident, although in certain contexts and phrases there may be a general tendency to prefer the one to the other. For ease of comparison, the following arrangement of the senses corresponds as closely as possible with that of ON. (See also HERE-, THERE-, WHEREUPON.)

I. Of local position outside of, but in contact with or close to, a surface.

1. Above and in contact with; in an elevated position on; at rest on the upper surface of; on and supported by; = ON prep. 1.

In a few instances in late MSS. (e.g. Hatton Gosp. Matt. v. 14) OE. up on can be taken in this sense, but appears to be merely a scribal variant or alteration of uppon for uppan Up prep.[1]

Ural [1] (yū·răl). [See def.] The name (more freq. Urals, Ural mountains) of a mountain-ch., in forming the north-eastern boundary of Europe with Asia, used attrib. in various specific appellations of birds, animals, etc., native to or found in that region, as Ural duck, lizard, etc. (see quots.).

1785 LATHAM Gen. Synop. Birds VI. 512 Ural duck, anas mersa, is a little bigger than the common Teal. 1881 LYELL Pigeons 8: The smooth-legged chequered or spangled ones are known in this country as Ural [ice]-pigeons. 1802 SHAW Gen. Zool. III. 229 Ural Lizard, Lacerta Uralensis, ..moves with great swiftness. 1781 LATHAM Gen. Synop. Birds I. 148 Ural Owl, Strix Uralensis,..is very full of feathers. 1824 STEPHENS Shaw's Gen. Zool. XII. II. 218 *Ural Scoter (Oidemia Leucocephala),..Ural Duck [of Latham],..is particularly abundant in Russia, Livonia, and Finnia.

b. Ural-Altaic, pertaining or belonging to the region including the Ural range and the Altaic mountains (in central Asia), its inhabitants, or their speech. Also absol., the family of agglutinative languages spoken in eastern Europe and northern Asia; Turanian; Finno-Tartar.

1885 MAX MÜLLER Lang. Seat of War 96 The third or Turkic branch of the Ural-Altaic division. 1890 SAYCE Introd. Sci. Lang. viii. II. 194 It seems to have been a possession of the undivided Ural-Altaic community. 1888 A. H. KEANE in Encycl. Brit. XXIV. 1/2 Hence it is that the roots..in Ural-Altaic are always in evidence.

Ural [2] (yū·răl). Med. [Irreg. f. UR-ETHANE.] A preparation of chloral hydrate and urethane, used as a hypnotic; chloral-urethane; = URALIUM.

1891 Cent. Dict. 1895 Buck's Handbk. Med. Sci. IX. 922/2 Ural has no advantage over chloral, and has the inconvenience of being soluble in water.

‖ Urali (urā·li). [var. of OORALI. Cf. WOORALI.] The urari-plant (Strychnos toxifera), or the poison obtained from this. Also attrib.

1862 in Veness El Dorado (1867) 131 The well-known Urali Poison is prepared from the bark of the Urali (Strychnos toxifera?). 1883 IM THURN among Indians Guiana 311 In Europe it is variously called..urari, urali, and curali.

Uralian (yurē·liăn), a. [f. URAL [1] + -IAN. Cf. F. ouralien.] Of or pertaining to, dwelling in or near, the Ural mountains; also, Ural-Altaic.

[1797 Encycl. Brit. XVIII. 691 Uralian Chain..of mountains.] 1802 Ibid. Suppl. II. 757/1 The Uralian Cossacks are all enthusiasts for the ancient ritual. 1866 Chamb. Jrnl. 28 Apr. 257/1 Some malachite specimens of doors, vases, and clocks, contributed by the emperor of Russia. These were for the most part Uralian, I believe. 1872 MAINE Hist. Inst. 65 That portion of..mankind which has lately been called Uralian, the Turks, Hungarians, and Finns.

Uralic (yurē·lik), a. [f. as prec. + -IC.] Of or belonging to the Ural mountains, or the peoples living in or near them.

1862 MAX MÜLLER Lect. Sci. Lang. 302 It is generally supposed that the original seat of the Finnic tribes was in the Ural mountains, and their languages have been therefore called Uralic. 1880 SAYCE Introd. Sci. Lang. viii. II. 191 The Finnic or Uralic dialects. Ibid. 192 The civilization and migrations of the primitive Uralic tribes.

Uralite (yū·răleit). Min. [ad. G. uralit (1831), f. Ural (mountains) + -ITE 1 2 b. Cf. F. ouralite.] 'Pyroxene altered to amphibole' (Chester).

1835 Penny Cycl. III. 85/2 The uralites of [Professor G.] Rose appear to be its natural consequence. 1849 MURCHISON Siluria App. C. 538 Hypersthene and diallage are partly changed into uralite. 1888 RUTLEY Rock-Forming Min. 180 The well-known paramorphic conversion [of augite] into hornblende, the result being termed Uralite.

b. Uralite-porphyry, -syenite: (see quots.).

1868 Watts' Dict. Chem. V. 940 Uralite-porphyry, an aphanite-porphyry occurring in the Ural, containing uralite, and sometimes also crystals of labradorite. 1888 Cassell's Encycl. Dict. VII. 982 Uralite-syenite, a variety of syenite which contains uralite.

Uralitic (yū·rălĭ·tik), a. Min. [f. prec. + -IC.] Of or pertaining to, containing or consisting of, uralite.

1845 tr. Humboldt's Cosmos I. 268 Melaphyre, Augitic, Uralitic, and Oligoclassic [sic] Porphyry. 1879 RUTLEY Stud. Rocks xii. 218 A little hornblende occurs, which..is generally of a uralitic character.

Uralium (yurē·liĭm). Med. [See URAL [2] and -IUM.] = URAL [2].

1889 Brit. Med. Jrnl. 16 March 609/1 Gustavo Poppi, a medical student of Bologna, recently described..the effects of a new hypnotic, which he proposes to call 'uralium.' Ibid., Uralium induces sleep more quickly..than any other known hypnotic. 1891 Lancet 3 Jan. 46/1 Uralium or chloral-urethane..has recently been carefully tested.

Uralo- (yurē·lō), combining form of URAL [1], occurring in a few terms, as Uralo-Altaic (= URAL [1] b); Uralo-Caspian, pertaining to or situated near the Ural river and the Caspian sea; Uralo-Finnic, of or pertaining to the ethnically-allied Ural-Altaic and Finnic peoples.

1867 Chambers' Encycl. IX. 670/1 The Uralo-Caspian deserts. 1876 J. B. MITCHELL Dates & Data 76 The Uralo-Finnic dialects of the present day. Ibid. 77 The Uralo-Finnic speaking people. 1879 Encycl. Brit. IX. 219/2 It is maintained by some that the Finnic languages represent the oldest forms among the Uralo-Altaic groups.

Uramil (yurē·mĭl). Chem. [G. uramil, f. UR-EA or UR-IC a. + AM-MONIA (or -IUM) + -il -YL.] Dialuramide; amido-barbituric acid; murexan.

1839 R. D. THOMSON in British Ann. 378 Uramil. 1841 BRANDE Chem. (ed. 5) 938 Uramil..a product of the decomposition of uramilic acid. Ibid., Uramil is soluble in sulphuric acid. 1878 C. M. TIDY Handbk. Med. Chem. 717 Boiling uramil and mercuric oxide in a weak solution of ammonia.

-ure (iŭ), a suffix, repr. F. -ure, L. -ūra (hence It., Sp., Pg. -ura), occurring in many words of F. or L. origin. In L. -ūra primarily denoted action or process, hence result of this, office, etc.; after further development in F., the use was extended in Eng., and denoted action or process, the result or product of this (e.g. enclosure, figure, picture, scripture), function, state, rank, dignity, or office (e.g. judicature, prefecture, prelature), a collective body (e.g. legislature), that by which the action is effected (e.g. clausure, closure, ligature, nourriture), etc. Many words were adopted from F. at an early date, as figure (a 1225–), scripture (a 1300–), nourriture (c 1374–), censure, closure, investiture, juncture, pressure, tonsure (1380–), fissure, scissure (c 1400–), etc.; while a few others, as clausure (1398), plicature (1578), mercature (a 1620), aperture (1640–), were directly adapted from L. The suffix was also added to Eng. stems of L. origin, giving composure (1599–), disposure (1569–), exposure (1605–), or to true L. stems, whence vomiture (1598), † beneficiature (1662), nuciture (1657–69), unigeniture (1659–); and was further used with stems of Romance origin, as in † bankrupture (1617–22), † disembogure (1653), † praisure (1622), and with native or other bases, as in † celefsure (1548, 1596), † raisure (1613, 1677), and wafture (1601–).

To this form various F. suffixes (as -eure, -ir, -or, -our) have been assimilated in Eng., as in pleasure, soilure, † troffi-(p)ture (TRAPPER sb.[1]), treasure, velure.

‖ Urea (yū·rĭ·ă). Chem. [ad. (with Latinized ending) F. urée (1803), f. Gr. οὖρον urine, or the verb οὐρέω. Cf. It., Sp., Pg. urea.]

1. A soluble crystalline compound, forming an organic constituent of the urine in mammalia, birds, and some reptiles, and also found in the blood, milk, etc.; carbamide, $CO(NH_2)_2$.

-uret (iŭret), Chem., a suffix, ad. mod.L. -ūrētum, -orētum, added to a stem or truncated word to form names of simple compounds of an element with another element or a radical. First used (after F. words in -ure) about 1790 in azoturet, hydruret, phosphuret, sulphuret (from azote, hydr-ogen, phosph-ore, sulph-ure), it was extended to other terms, as carburet, niturat (1794), iodurat (1810), selenisuret (1818), and (more recently) arsenisuret, bromuret, chloruret, cyanuret, floruret, hydroguret, telluret, etc. It is now largely replaced by -IDE, q.v.

The French school of chemists in 1787 proposed the suffix -urètum, -urétum, in mod.L. terms (as phosphurètum, sulphurètum); but in F. words they preferred the suffix -ure (1787 De Morveau, etc. Méthode de Nomenclature Chimique 207, 231, etc.).

1836 Brande Chem. (ed. 4) 1179 The urine of the rhinoceros: ..the clear portion,..on the addition of muriatic acid, deposits urobenzoic acid. 1858 Copland Dict. Pract. Med. III. 1204 Urobenzoic acid exists chiefly in the urine of herbivorous animals.

Urobilin (yūroʊbōi·lin). Chem. Also -ine. [f. Uro-[1] L. bīl-is bile: see -in[1], and cf. F. urobiline.] A brownish resinous pigment found in the urine, and occas. in the blood.

1876 tr. Wagner's Gen. Path. (ed. 6) 638 The urine of man constantly contains a red pigment—urobilin. 1887 Brit. Med. Jrnl. 17 Sept. 645/2 Urobiline exists in the urine either alone, or associated with bilary pigments.

Urobilinuria. Path. [f. prec. + Gr. οὖρ-ον urine: see -ia[1].] A morbid condition characterized by excess of urobilin in the urine.

1887 Brit. Med. Jrnl. 17 Sept. 645/2 Urobilinuria is always met with in the period of asystolia, in cardiac diseases. 1897 Lancet 27 March 884/1 That trional would give rise to excessive urobilinuria.

Urochord (yū·rōkɔ·rd). Zool. [f. Uro-[2] + Chord sb.]

1. The notochord of ascidians and tunicates, regarded as corresponding to the primordial spinal column in vertebrates.

1877 Huxley Anat. Inv. Anim. x. 595 The appendage..may be termed the urochord. Ibid. 598 A ganglion..passes along one side of the urochord to its extremity. 1880 A. Wilson in Cantl. Mag. Jan. 46 Among the sea-squirts, the 'urochord' persists throughout life.

2. One of the Urochorda, a branch consisting of ascidians or tunicates.

1885 F. J. Bell Comp. Anat. 313 Amphioxus has no external skeleton, nor have those Urochords that are tailed throughout life.

Urochrome (-krōum). Chem. [f. Uro-[1] + Gr. χρῶμα Chrome. Hence F. urochrome.] A yellow, amorphous pigment found in the urine.

1864 Thudichum in Brit. Med. Jrnl. 5 Nov. 513/1, I consider that there is one colouring matter in the urine, to which I appropriate the name of Urochrome. 1900 Lancet 10 Nov. 1390/2 Urochrome itself a place must be assigned among the derivatives of hæmoglobin.

‖Urochs (ʊə·r-, yʊə·rɔks). [G., var. of auerochs Aurochs. Cf. Ure-ox.] (See quots.)

1839 Penny Cycl. XIV. 54/2 An animal peculiar to Lithuania is the urochs, or bison. 1864 J. Hunt tr. Vogt's Lect. Man xii. 335 The bones found belonged to..the now extinct 'urochs' (Bos primigenius);..the Lithuanian Bison, or Aurochs (Bos urus, or Bison Europæus)..is a distinct species. 1881 Nature XXIII. 296 Post-tertiary animals (such as mammoth, rhinoceros, urochs).

Urodelan, sb. Zool. [f. next + -an.] = next.

1872 Humphry Myology 3 In Urodelans..the movements of the bony pieces are restricted, or nearly so, to one plane. 1879 Nicholson Palæont. (ed. 2) II. 175 The Palæosiren of Gelnitz..is from the Lower Permian, and is believed by its discoverer to be a Urodelan.

Urodele (yū·rɔdīl), sb. and a. Zool. [a. F. urodèle, usu. pl. urodèles (Duméril), or ad. mod.L. Urodēla, neuter pl. of Urodēlus*, f. Gr. οὐρ-ά Uro-[2] + δῆλος evident.]

A. sb. A member of the order Urodela of amphibians, in which the larval tail persists in adult life; a Urodelan.

1842 Brande Dict. Sci., etc. 1278 Urodeles, Urodelæ,..that tribe of Caducibranchiate Batrachian repiles which preserve the tail through all stages of their existence. c 1899 Todd's Cycl. Anat. IV. ii. 1254 The amphibious Urodeles. 1874 Mivart Frog 42 The largest existing Urodele—the gigantic Salamander (Cryptobranchus)—is found in Japan.

B. adj. Belonging to the Urodela (see prec.).

1874 Mivart Common Frog 49 The world's surface may be divided according to its Urodele population into three regions. 1875 Huxley in Encycl. Brit. I. 762/1 No urodele amphibian has more than four digits in the manus.

Hence Urodelous a., pertaining to, having the characteristics of, the Urodela.

c 1844 Todd's Cycl. Anat. III. 448/2 The urodelous kinds of Caducibranchiates. 1861 R. E. Grant Tabular View Rec. Zool. 14 Noctilionidæ...With distinct tail (urodelous). 1881 A. S. Packard Zoölogy 479 A step higher in the Urodelous scale is the Menopoma.

Uroerythric, a. Chem. [f. next: see -ic 1 b.] Derived from uroerythrin.

1871 Watts tr. Gmelin's Handbk. Chem. XVIII. 408 Uro-erythric acid [is obtained] by mixing urine with half its volume of hydrochloric acid.

Uroerythrin. Chem. Also -ine. [f. Uro-[1] + Erythrin.] A reddish pigment found in the urine of persons suffering from fevers, esp. rheumatic fever.

1845 G. E. Day tr. Simon's Anim. Chem. I. 216 Uroerythrin, in all probability, owes its origin to the hæmatin of the blood-corpuscles. 1863 W. O. Markham tr. Anal. Urine, etc. 49 Uroerythrine is the pigment which gives to sediments of uric acid and urate of soda their brick or rosy red colour. 1889 Buck's Handbk. Med. Sci. VII. 416 Its oxidation [i.e. of urochrome] gives rise to a red pigment called uroerythrin.

Urogenital, a. (and sb.). Comp. Anat. [f. Uro-[1] + Genital a. Cf. F. urogénital and Urino-genital a.]

1. adj. Pertaining or belonging to the urinary and genital products or organs; genito-urinary.

1848 Quain's Elem. Anat. II. 1278 Transformation of the uro-genital sinus. 1870 Rolleston Anim. Life p. xlvii, All Mammalia have a urogenital canal independent..of the termination of the intestine. 1883 E. R. Lankester in Encycl. Brit. XVI. 692/1 In the Ostrea edulis fertilization of the eggs is effected at the moment of their escape from the uro-genital groove.

2. sb. A urogenital organ. Usu. pl.

1891–1 in various Dicts.

So Urogenitary a.

1884 Lancet 19 May 875/2 Co-existent defects of urogenitary organs.

Uroglaucin (-glɔ·sin). Chem. Also -ine. [a. G. uroglaucin: see Uro-[1] and -in[1], and cf. Glaucous a.] A blue pigment found in the human urine during certain diseases, as scarlet fever.

1846 G. E. Day tr. Simon's Anim. Chem. II. 523 The existence of a large quantity of uroxanthin in urine is indicated..by the presence of the products of its oxidation, uroglaucin and urrhodin. 1863 W. O. Markham tr. Anal. Urine, etc. 45 Uroglaucine presents itself in the form of a blue powder. 1889 Buck's Handbk. Med. Sci. VII. 417/1 Uroglaucin (blue) and urrhodin (red) are closely related to indigo blue and indigo red.

Urohæmatin (yū·rōhī·mätin). Chem. Also -hematin(e. [f. Uro-[1] + Hæmatin.] A variety of hæmatin forming the colouring matter or pigments of the urine.

1863 W. O. Markham tr. Anal. Urine, etc. 43 Dr. Harley calls this body urohæmatine. 1869 N. Syd. Soc. Year-bk. Med. 161 An excessive excretion of uro-hæmatin. 1878 Kingzett Animal. Chem. 230 Under the name of Urohæmatine, Proust, Scherer, Harley, Heller, Marcet, constituted the colouring principles of urine.

Urohyal (-hɔi·āl), a. and sb. Comp. Anat. [f. Uro-[2]: see Hy-oid a. and -al 1.] a. adj. Forming or relating to a median posterior process or part of the hyoid arch in fishes or birds. b. sb. The bone forming this.

1835-6 Owen in Todd's Cycl. Anat. I. 345/2 The superior larynx [in birds]...rests upon the uro-hyoid element of the os hyoides. 1848 — Archetype & Homol. Vertebr. Skel. 69 In most others [sc. fishes] there is...another...bone, which expands vertically as it extends backwards, in the middle line, from the basihyals; this is the 'urohyal'. 1888 Robertson & Jackson Anim. Life 95 A thin median bone, the basi-branchiostegal (= urohyal of Huxley).

Urology (yurp·l̈ŏdʒi). Also 8 (9) ourology. [f. Uro-[1] + -logy. Cf. F. urologie (1877) and Urinology.] † a. A treatise or discourse on urines. Obs. b. The scientific study of urine, its secretion and constituents.

1753 Chambers' Cycl. Suppl. s.v., The chemists have given us treatises on the analysis of urine, and the preparations of it, such as the phosphorus, &c. under the name of ourologies. 1855 Day in British & For. Medico-Chirurg. Jrnl. July 71 Contributions to Urology. 1895 Lancet 12 Jan. 95/2 Now there are many works on urology.

Hence Urolo·gical a., pertaining to or dealing with urology; Uro·logist, one versed or skilled in urology.

1855 Day in Brit. & For. Medico-Chirurg. Jrnl. July 89 The various causes...are discussed...by Beneke in his Urological Studies. 1889 Lancet 23 June 1216/2 Professor Heller...has a high reputation as a urologist. 1903 Times 9 Aug. 4/2 The Surgical and Urological Sections [of the Congress of Medicine].

† Ū·romancy. Obs. [ad. mod.L. uromantia; see Uro-[1] and -mancy, and cf. F. uromancie, Sp. uromancia.] = Urinomancy.

1569 J. Sanford tr. Agrippa's Vanity Artes lxxxiii. 145 b. For this cause Scotomantics, Oromancie [sic], Drymimancie, be called the diuinations or Prognostications of Phisitians, gathered by ordures and urines. 1625 Hart Anat. Ur. v. 47 This Parson being..reputed famous in vromancie. [1721 Bailey. 1823 Crabb.]

† Uroma·ntical, a. Obs.[-1] [f. mod.L. uromantia (see prec.) + -ical.] Of or pertaining to urinomancy.

1623 Hart Arraignm. Ur. v. 70 A certaine Physitian of no small account and fame for his supposed uromanticall skill.

‖ Uroma·stix. Zool. [mod.L.; see Uro-[2] and -mastix.] One or other species of a genus (Uromastix) of thorn-tailed, agamoid ground-lizards, native to parts of the Old World and Australia.

In earlier use only as the generic name.

[1681 Grew Museum 46. 1753 Chambers' Cycl. Suppl. s.v. Corelylus. 1838 Penny Cycl. XII. 441. 1840 Cuvier's Anim. Kingd. 275.] 1860 Tristram Gt. Sahara 406 Uromastix Spinipes, Geoff.; the dabb (common uromastyx).

Uroo (yūə·ru). Austr. Also yuro. [Native name (also euro, waroo).] A species of kangaroo. Also attrib.

1886 Waterhouse in R. P. Whitworth Baillieres's S. Austral. Gazetteer (1886) 165 The uroo kangaroo was occasionally seen in the same localities. 1896 — in Harcus S. Austral. 284 Osphranter erubescens, Uroo kangaroo. 1895 Mrs. Praed Head Station II. 256 Cliffs, with ledges and crannies that afforded foothold only to yuros and rock-wallabies.

Uropoietic (yūərəpoi·ə·tik), a. Also 8 -poietic. [ad. mod.L. uropoietic-us: see Uro-[1] and Poietic a., and cf. F. uropoétique.] Concerned with, of or pertaining to, the secretion of urine; secreting or excreting urine.

1783 H. Watson in Med. Commun. I. 234 The uropoetic viscera were not..diseased. 1793 T. Beddoes Calculus 37 Such an action of the uropoietic organs. 1839-47 Todd's Cycl. Anat. III. 966/1 The uropoietic system...communicates with the respiratory cavity. 1877 Huxley Anat. Inv. Anim. i. 62 Uropoietic organs..are probably represented by the water-vascular system and segmental organs of the worms.

Uropygial (-pi·dʒiăl), a. and sb. Ornith. [a. F. uropygial: see Uropygi-um and -al.]

1. adj. Situated on, belonging to, the rump or uropygium. Usn. uropygial gland.

1890 Rolleston Anim. Life 16 The crop and the uropygial gland are peculiar to, though not universally found in Birds. 1884 Coues N. Amer. Birds 86 This is a two-lobed..gland, saddled upon the 'pope's nose', at the root of the tail, and hence sometimes called the uropygial or rump gland. 1891 Cent. Dict. s.v., Uropygial feathers.

2. sb. A rump-feather.

1886 Newton in Encycl. Brit. XX. 280/2 The middle feathers of the tail, ordinarily concealed..by the uropygials, are black.

‖ Uropygium (-pi·dʒiəm). Ornith. [med.L. uropygium (Diefenb.), ad. Gr. οὐροπύγιον. Cf. It. and Pg. uropigio.] The rump in birds.

1813 Bingley Anim. Biog. (ed. 4) II. 535 The brilliant train of the Peacock..not growing from the uropygium (or rump,) but upon the back. 1835-6 Owen in Todd's Cycl. Anat. I. 349/1 A gland which is above the coccyx or uropygium. 1886 P. L. Sclater Catal. Birds Brit. Mus. XI. 17 Cap, uropygium, and upper wing-coverts shining blue.

Uroscopy (yurp·skŏpi). Also 7 ouroscopie, 9 -scopy. [ad. mod.L. uroscopia; see Uro-[1] and -scopy, and cf. Sp. uroscopia, F. uroscopie.]

1. The scientific examination of urine, esp. as a means of diagnosing diseases; = Urinoscopy.

1646 Sir T. Browne Pseud. Ep. To Rdr. A 4, Composed by statches of time, as medicall vacations and the fruitlesse importunity of Vroscopy would permit us. [1656 Blount, 1658 Phillips.] 1804 Edin. Rev. III. 415 Uroscopy has, in some measure, given way to craniscopy. 1863 W. O. Markham Urd. and Urine, etc. 282 The progress of Organic Chemistry, and the general study of the microscope, first gave its scientific value to uroscopy. 1888 Libr. Mag. (N.Y.) Mar. 252 As a physician he was skilful in dietetics and uroscopy.

1650 H. Brooke Conserv. Health 209 The Vanities and Deceits of Vroscopy, or Devination by Vrin. 1651 Wittie Primrose's Pop. Errr. To Rdr., Many of them doe by Ouroscopie or Chiromancie undertake to tell Fortunes. 1857 Mayne Expos. Lex. 847 Ouroscopia,...ouroscopy.

Hence Uroscopic a. [F. uroscopique], = Urinoscopic a. (Cent. Dict., 1891); U·roscopist, one skilled or versed in uroscopy.

1889 Buck's Handbk. Med. Sci. VII. 403/2 Actuarius, the 'Uroscopist' of the Byzantine court, described in the minutest detail the visible changes of urine in health and in disease.

Uroste·alith. Chem. [ad. G. urostealit (Heller, 1845), f. uro- Uro-[1] + Gr. στέαρ fat + -lit -lith.] A peculiar fatty substance found in certain urinary calculi.

1846 G. Bird Urin. Deposits (ed. 2) 314 The urine, in the only case in which urostealith has been hitherto found. 1898 Thudichum Urine 415 Urostealith was found dissolved in the urine.

attrib. 1872 Bevant Pract. Surg. 523 The uro-stealith, and the siliceous formations. 1883 Holmes' Syst. Surg. (ed. 3) III. 250 The uro-stealith calculus is another of the pseudo-forms.

So Uroste·alite. [Cf. -lite.]

1854 R. D. Thomson Cycl. Chem. 511/2 Urostealite, an urinary calculus insoluble in water. 1868 Watts' Dict. Chem. V. 968.

U·rostyle. Biol. [f. Uro-[2] + Gr. στῦλος pillar.] The posterior unsegmented portion of the vertebral column in certain fishes and amphibians.

1875 Huxley & Martin Elem. Biol. 183 The commencement of the canal of the urostyle. Ibid. 204-6. 1878 F. J. Bell Comparator's Comp. Anat. 433 A long, daggar-shaped bony piece..ordinarily known as the urostyle. 1888 Rolleston & Jackson Anim. Life 94 The last or terminal caudal vertebra..has the centrum prolonged into the urostyle.

Uroto·xic, a. [See Uro-[1] and Toxic a.] Of or pertaining to the toxicity or toxic materials of the urine.

1890 Billings Med. Dict. s.v. 1897 Allbutt's Syst. Med. IV. 330 By comparing the amount of urine injected with the weight of the animal he established what he [sc. Bouchard] called urotoxic equivalens. 1898 [see next].

U·rotoxy. [Cf. prec. The fuller form urotoxicity is sometimes used.] The toxic quality or substance of the urine; a unit of urine in respect of its toxicity.

1890 G. M. Gould Med. Dict. 452/2 Urotoxy, a term invented by Bouchard to denote the standard of toxicity of urine necessary to kill a kilogramme of living substance. 1898 V. C. Vaughan Ptomaïns, etc. 225 The term urotoxy has been employed to designate the relative toxicity of the urine in various conditions. Ibid. 227 The urotoxic coefficient is the number of urotoxies which 1 kgm. of man forms in twenty-four hours.

1879 J. Todhunter Alcestis 19 Uroxen from the mountains..Lashing their lazy tails. [1879- in various Dicts.]

Uro·xanate. Chem. rare[-1]. [f. Uroxan-ic a. + -ate[1] 1 c.] A salt of uroxanic acid.

1868 Watts Dict. Chem. V. 969 After several weeks or months, tabular crystals of potassic uroxanate are formed.

Uroxanic (yūərzksæ·nik), a. Chem. [f. Uroxan-thin + -ic 1 b.] Of an acid: Obtained by oxidation of uric acid in alkaline solution.

1854 R. D. Thomson Cycl. Chem. 512/1 Uroxanic Acid..; obtained by allowing a solution of uric acid in excess of potash to stand, when this acid is deposited along with urate of potash. 1868 Watts' Dict. Chem. V. 969 A yellowish hygroscopic substance is left,..having the composition of uroxanic anhydride, $C^{10}N^{4}H^{8}O^{7}$ (which is also that of dialurate of ammonium). 1884 Roscoe & Schorlemmer Treat. Chem. III. 11. 257 Uroxanic Acid, $C_{5}H_{3}N_{4}O_{3}$, is formed when a solution of uric acid in caustic potash is exposed for some months to the action of air free from carbon dioxide.

Uroxa·nthin (yūərzksæ·nθin). Chem. Also -ine. [a. G. uroxanthin (Heller): see Uro-[1] and Xanthin(e. Cf. F. uroxanthine.] = Indican.

1846 G. Bird Urin. Deposits (ed. 2) 73 Heller has lately given the name of uroxanthin to the reputed pigment, but which he has not succeeded in separating. 1858 Thudichum Urine 4 The lemon-yellow colour, sometimes met with in cholera, or in spinal disease, is due to the presence of an excess of uroxanthine. 1889 Buck's Handbk. Med. Sci. VII. 416/2 Urine indican (Heller's uroxanthin and the indogen of Thudichum) is not a pigment.

‖ Urraca. Also uraca. [Sp. urraca magpie.] (See quots.)

1888 R. W. White in Proc. Zool. Soc. 619 Cutrra piririgua (Vieill.)..The native name of this noisy bird is 'Uraca'; and it is found abundantly all over the [Argentine] Republic. Ibid., The Uracas are sometimes tamed and kept in houses to rid them of insects. 1894-5 Lydekker Roy. Nat. Hist. III. 321 The urraca [sp. Cyanocorax chrysops] is a well-known Brazilian species.

Urre, var. Irre sb. Obs.

Urrhodin (yū·rrŏdin). Chem. Also -ine. [ad. G. urorhodin (Heller), f. uro- Uro-[1] + Gr. ῥόδον the rose + -in[1].] A red colouring matter or pigment found in the urine in certain morbid conditions.

1846 G. E. Day tr. Simon's Anim. Chem. II. 522 Uroglaucin and urrhodin occur in diseases..similar in one [character]—the presence of an excess of iron in the blood. 1863 W. O. Markham tr. Anal. Urine, etc. 45 In an amorphous state, urrhodine forms rosy-red granules. 1889 [see Uroglaucin].

Hence Urrhodinic (-i·nik) a., pertaining to or derived from urrhodin.

1886 R. Kirk in Brit. Med. Jrnl. 27 Nov. 1018/2 We would propose to call it, from its source and from its colour, Urrhodinic acid. Ibid., The crystals of urrhodinic acid.
